TEACHING FOR CREATIVITY INSTITUTE

“This is the first PD I’ve felt was completely relevant. I left every day inspired and driven to be a better teacher” – Whitney K.

“This year has been a treat of not only making me think differently and providing new ideas, but also allowing me to meet new people to collaborate with” – Halie M.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO EXPLORE CREATIVITY AS A MEANS TO RE-ENERGIZE YOUR PRACTICE AND CONNECT TO A COMMUNITY OF TEACHER-LEARNERS?

We are seeking teachers of any subject matter, who are life-long learners interested in cultivating creativity in their classrooms. Participants in our Teaching for Creativity Institute will experience a four-day, dynamic immersion into ideas and practices for fostering creativity. Throughout the subsequent school year, educators collaborate to support one another in implementing strategies and pursuing curiosities through three, single-day workshops designed to support them in being effective and inspiring agents for creativity in their own classrooms and schools. The Institute is co-designed by CMA Learning Department staff and central Ohio master classroom teachers.

The Institute is open to all teachers. Cost of the program is $425 per teacher, $350 per teacher in a school team of 2 or more, and $325 per person for teams that include administrators. Scholarships available for teachers who would be paying out-of-pocket. Contact Jennifer.Lehe@cmaohio.org for details.

For more information please contact, info@cmaohio.org . To register, complete the non-competitive application here: https://forms.gle/Rci2E6ooM3Pngzod7 . Applications due April 17.

At the Columbus Museum of Art, we believe that creativity is for everyone. It is the basis of innovation, and it makes change possible in our lives, our communities, and our world.
